

Hiya!

My name is Ray K. Soeun and I create theatrical performances utilizing my mind, body, and soul to share stories that compel diverse audiences and engage the world around us.

I have a specific passion for new play development, movement theatre & stage combat, and the great works of Shakespeare. I am driven by new and exciting ways to expose the human condition. It is for this purpose that I love to tell new stories, especially when I can use my body to tell them, or breathe new life into Shakespeare by presenting his works today.

I am a proud, queer, first-generation Cambodian-American, and for those of you who are interested, I am a Capricorn. I mention my identity because my identity is married to my art. I seek to advocate for and uplift diverse communities and to protect their legacies.

If you are looking for a self-driven artist with the stamina and flexibility to keep up with an ever-changing social climate, then I am your artist.

I strive to not only be a theatre maker, but a reflection of our own society.

Sincerely,
Ray K. Soeun
